Q1) Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow it : [6]

Organizations are institutions in which members compete for status and power. They compete for the resource of the organization e.g. finance to expand their own departments, for career advancement and for power to control the activities of others. In pursuance of these aims, groups are formed and sectional interest emerge. As a result, policy decisions may serve the end of the political and career systems rather than those of the concern. In this way, the goals of the organization may be displaced in favour of sectional interest and individual ambition. These pre-occupations sometimes prevent the emergence of organic systems. Many of electronics firms in their study had recently created research and development departments employing highly qualified and well paid scientists and technicians. Their high pay and expert knowledge were sometimes seen as a threat to the established order of rank; power and privilege. Many senior managers had little knowledge of the technicalities and possibilities of new developments and electronics. Some felt that close cooperation with the experts in organic system would reveal their ignorance and show that their experience was redundant.

- i) What does the author make out a case for? [1]
- ii) What do members in organization compete for? [1]
- iii) What is the main theme of passage? [1]
- iv) Why were well paid scientists and technician seen as a threat? [1]
- v) What should policy decisions in organisation involve? [1]
- vi) What does the author tend to see the senior managers as? [1]

Q2) Make the precis of the following and suggest a suitable title. [6]

Dendrochronologists have constructed tree rings records extending back for thousands of years in some parts of the world. Each such record is valid for a geographic area whose extent depends on local weather patterns because weather and hence tree growth patterns vary with location. For instance, the basic tree ring chronology of the American Southwest applies (with some variation) to the area from northern Mexico to Wyoming.

A bonus of dendrochronology is that the width and substructure of each ring reflect the amount of rain and the season at which the rain fell during that particular year. Thus, tree ring studies also allow one to reconstruct past climate; e.g. a series of wide rings means a wet period and a series of narrow rings meant a drought.

Q3) Translate the following passage into Marathi/Hindi. [6]

A 'Bank' is a financial institution whose main activities are borrowing and lending money. Banks borrow by accepting deposits from the general public or other financial institutions. Commercial banks may be all-purpose or specialised. In India public sector commercial banks are owned by government. Specialised commercial banks like investment banks specialise on loans to firms; merchant banks on financing capital market transactions and international trade. Central banks supervise the banking system and control the money supply. Our central Bank is the Reserve Bank of India. In the US, it is the Federal Reserve; in France Banque De France; and in the UK, the Bank of England. There are also international Banks. The world Bank or the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development is an investment Bank at the international level.

Paraphrase the following poem :

What is this life, full of care
 We have no time to stand and stare
 No time to stand beneath the boughs,
 And stare as long as sheep or cow
 No time to see, when woods we pass,
 Where squirrels hide their nuts in grass
 No time to see, in broad daylight,
 Streams full of stars, like sky at night
